MISTAKEN FOR A BURGLAR.

Benjamin Barstow Shot Dead by Farmer Albert May.

Barstow Thought He Was in His Brother's House.

The little village of Ramseys, N. J., is in a state of excitement over the killing of Benjamin Barstow, who was shot dead late Saturday night by Albert May, who thought that Barstow was a burglar.

Barstow's death was due to a series of mistakes. Saturday afternoon he, with his brother, Edward Barstow, went to Ramseys from this city.

Benjamin intended staying over Sunday with Edward, who recently bought a farm a mile east of the village.

Edward went into Ramsey's grocery store to make some purchases leaving his brother outside.

In some way Benjamin missed Edward in the crowd gathered about the front of the store, and thinking that his brother had gone home alone, Benjamin started for the farm.

He had only been there once before, and tumbled off up the road due west, just the opposite direction from the one he should have taken.

Farmer May's house is very similar to that owned by Edward Barstow, and Benjamin, mistaking it for his brother's home, tried the front door.

When he found it locked and not being successful in waking anybody up, he burst the door open and entered the door.

INVITED HIM TO SHOOT.

The Story of the Killing of Young John Andreas.

CARLETT, N. J., Nov. 7.—The inquest into the death of young John Andreas, the eleven-year-old boy who was shot and killed by Charles Jordan, a companion, while playing with a revolver on the commons here yesterday afternoon, will be held late this afternoon.

So far there seems to have been no motive for the shooting. The unfortunate lad, it appears, fell his hat over his head and asked Jordan if he could hit it. The boy fired and the bullet went through Andreas, killing him instantly.

Jordan denied having shot his companion when arrested, and declared that a big man with whiskers fired the shot and then escaped to the woods.

Young Jordan is in the lockup, where he was committed to await the inquest.
